

SNAPPY AUTUMN FASHION NOTES

FALL skirts are not quite as full and flaring, due to the fact that the platted designs have replaced circular models to a great extent.

Redingote dresses are very popular. The fittest type of gown of the moyen age is suitable for the slim figure. Both redingote and princess style garments have the long line broken at the hips, which is an improvement on the princess dress of former years.

Generally speaking, sleeves are long and snug fitting except when chiffon is used, in which case the full, straight sleeve is shirred into a tight wrist-band. Some new sleeves have increased fullness at the elbow, with the forearm fitting snugly. In coat suits the mannish fit for the sleeve at the shoulder is preferred and is very smart. Cuffs are much varied in the way of trimming, with odd insets and slashes that are piped with satin or velvet.

Pockets are ornamented with odd shaped flaps, buttons or soutache braiding. The braiding is much used on separate coats where gold or black silk braid adds a military touch.

Dark blue, brown, green, red and other colored blouses that will match the coat suit are prominent in fall styles. The collars are high and snug fitting, although some flat designs are seen. These matching blouses give the appearance of a three piece garment. Satin, silk, crepe, lace, fluffs, etc., are the materials much used. The prominent military touch gives these new blouses a tailored severe look in contrast to the former fluffy flimsiness. Sleeves are simulated, buttons added, and the general cut is quite mannish except in dressy blouses.

Many separate skirts are plaited, with tailored belts. Three tiered models in dressy skirts are shirred where the fullness appears at the sides and back only.

Evening gowns are of net, brocaded weaves, tinsel broche, beaded effects, lace, etc., in a vast assortment of styles. The bodices are extremely simple and skirts full. Shirring is much used, as the fullness must be held in in some manner, and this treatment is best for silk and satin. The formal evening dress is sleeveless and very delicate, both front and back. A favorite shoulder strap is of jet.

Cable cords are used to hold out skirts at the hem, giving almost a crinoline effect. Young girls like this style for dancing frocks. The wide giraffe that almost forms the bodice is a favorite. The ruffles of the newest beaded skirts extend in close succession from waist line to hem, but in the back only. They are a direct introduction to the coming bustle modes.

Suit coat lengths are more varied than for many seasons past. Some are to the waist line only, others hip length and long redingote styles. Separate coats are long, almost covering the gown beneath.

Between season hats are interesting. One of navy blue taffeta, a somewhat elongated toque, is trimmed directly in front with a cluster of short, curled paradise feathers that are balanced in back by a somewhat higher cluster.

AGAIN SALADS.

THE French have long since learned the value of salads, and nowadays in the poorest homes in France a salad nearly always forms part of the dinner. The French salads are thought to be the best in the world, but without their fragrant herbs they would be quite like the American ones. The herbs most used in salads are tarragon, borrag, chervil, chives and pimpernel. Salads that contain various mixed vegetables are called Italian salads, for all eatable odds and ends are made into salads by this thrifty people.

For salads none but the strongest vinegar and the purest of olive oil should be chosen. If fresh vegetables are used they should be revived in plenty of water and well drained and dried on a soft cloth. If the draining is not thorough the dressing will be watery and the salad spoiled. A salad shaker, consisting of two woven wire cups placed together, is a good invention and greatly helps the drying, as most of the water can be shaken from the vegetables by its use.

Plain salad should never be prepared until required at table, for if mixed long before being used the lettuce withers and the dressing becomes watery. Lettuce should be torn into pieces with the fingers, not cut with a knife, as it is deadened by contact with the blade. The Spanish proverb for mixing salad says, "A counselor for salt, a mixer for vinegar, a spendthrift for oil and a madman to stir all together."

THE IDEAL MODERN FEMALE FORM

SO many women realize that their bodies are out of proportion, that they are too heavy for their height or that they look ill formed, but they do not know where the trouble lies. There are some irregularities of form which can be corrected by the reduction or gaining of flesh or by the stretching of certain muscles. For instance, one can add as much as an inch to one's height by stretching exercises. It is well, if you would have a really good figure, to know just what the ideal female figure should measure. Modern artists have deduced from a study of the old Greek statues, the most perfect examples of female anatomy, that the ideal female form should show the following proportions: A height of five feet five inches requires a weight of 135 pounds. With arms extended a woman should measure her height from tip to tip of the middle fingers. The length of the hand should be one-tenth the height, the foot one-seventh and the diameter of the chest one-fifth. The distance from the top of the head to the chin should be the same as the length of the foot, and there should be the same distance between the chin and the armpits. From the elbow to the little finger should be the same distance as from the elbow to the middle of the chest. A woman five feet five inches tall should measure twenty-nine inches around the waist and thirty-four inches bust if measured under the arms and forty-three if measured over them. The upper arm should measure thirteen inches and the wrist six. The calf of the leg should measure fourteen and one-half inches, the thigh twenty-five and the ankle eight inches. Measure up and see how near to the ideal you come!

SHOPPING DON'TS.

DO not assume a haughty air over the counter. Saleswomen are human. Don't change your mind about four or five times as to whether you will have the article sent or take it with you. If you are getting off at the second floor step to one side in the elevator, so that you will not have to disarrange every bit of headgear in making your way to the front. Don't carry a hand bag on your arm by a strap that will catch in everything you pass or an umbrella with the point at the level of most people's eyes. Take small parcels home with you, and if you have carried your manners into the shopping district don't forget to carry them home again. The family enjoys a cheery smile at the dinner table.

KUHIO'S SUIT TO BREAK TRUST OF QUEEN IS VALID

ing in every respect capable of making the trust deed could, upon her own motion, revoke it at any time, regardless of the provisions as to the trustees, joining in the revocation.

"As regards the absolute right of the queen to appear in court and demand a restoration of her property," the decision continues, "and that this trust be annulled, although she was fully capable of making the trust, but does not desire it to continue any longer, there may be ground for dispute. As for myself, I believe she has that right."

"But such is not this case. The present action presents one of fraud, mistake and over-reaching upon the part of others who sought to obtain her property through this deed, and of mistake on her part and of incapacity on her part to take care of her interests. Under such facts as are here presented, I do not know of any case that holds that the deed cannot be set aside."

"The Prince Has Right. I think, therefore, that the prince has the right to protect his continuing interest in the estate of the queen from all friends and over-reaching that may have been practised. If she (the queen) is disabled from making contracts he has the right to strike down such contracts now while she is living as it might be impossible to do so after her death."

"Again, I say that because he may be able to strike down this deed of trust, it does not follow that he will ever obtain the property or any part of it. Both demurrers are overruled. Judge Stuart states that he considers that the affidavit of the queen an objection to the prince's continuing to act as her next friend. If the allegations of the complaint are true, he adds, the queen cannot get a dismissal of complaint because she is incompetent to employ an attorney to ask for a dismissal. The allegations of that complaint, says the court, must be tried."

The respondents in the case have been given 10 days in which to answer the complaint filed by Delegate Kalaniano'ole.

SAYS ATTORNEY ABUSED HABEAS CORPUS PROCESS

Judge Clemons Denies Petition of Nobu Mitobe, Repeating Judge Dole's Action

In handing down an opinion dismissing the petition of one Nobu Mitobe for a writ of habeas corpus, Federal Judge C. F. Clemons has a few remarks to make concerning the "abuse" of the habeas corpus process.

According to the opinion, Hon. Sanford B. Dole determined the Mitobe matter on July 5, 1913, finding against the petitioner. Her attorney, J. Lightfoot, gave notice of appeal, but failed to carry the case to a higher court. Later, however, Lightfoot brought in another petition which contained several amendments to the original one. Commenting on this procedure, Judge Clemons says:

"In discharging the writ of habeas corpus in this case, it must be said that the court regards counsel as having caused an abuse of its process. This petition adds nothing to the petition for a writ in a previous case, determined on July 5, 1913, by his honor Judge Dole, adversely to the petitioner. For the added allegations of her employment as a nurse (to show that she is no longer likely to become a public charge, as was a ground of the order denying her admission to the country), and the added allegation of her present good moral character (to show that she was not imported for immoral purposes, as was another ground of said order), and the added allegation of her failure by accident and mistake to perfect an appeal from Judge Dole's said order, therefore as her petition reads depriving her of her right to an appeal, are each and all not only irrelevant and immaterial, but to say the least, frivolous and trifling."

"Nor is the sham character of the petition at all cured by the allegation of the appeal's having been heard by another person than the secretary of labor, when the secretary was himself officially present in Washington and no one else could, therefore, be authorized to hear it. For that allegation is merely one of 'belief,' and it is remarkable that there is not even the usual allegation of information to support the belief."

PLAN OLD TIME WATER CARNIVAL ON FEBRUARY 20

A. A. Wilder Suggests Revival of Day of Hawaiian Sports at Waikiki Beach

One of the plans which has been arranged for the big Hawaiian Water Carnival is a real Hawaiian luau, which will be staged on the beach. The mainline will be given an idea of how the feast is prepared, and Mr. Rawlins has announced that the feast makers will be given plenty of material for a real Hawaiian luau. The Hawaiian band will also be secured for the day.

an added feature that will be one of the attractions will be the appearance of Duke Kahanamoku, Ludy Langer and many of the best Hawaiian swimmers. Although these stars will not compete in the events, it is certain that they will at least give exhibitions. Miss Frances Covells will also be present on that date.

"Mr. Wilder's suggestion is a good idea, and will be carried out. It will give the Hawaiians a day of their own and inasmuch as the Water Carnival has been neglected for five or six years, it will bring back the spirit of the Carnival. Visitors will appreciate the events, I am sure, and Honolulu people will welcome the return of a big day in aquatics," said Mr. Rawlins today.

Old sheets should be made into bags in which to hang one's suits or dresses.

Save the broken toys for the rainy days. They are a real source of interest. Don't forget that it is important to consider the aspect of a room before choosing the color of its wall paper and decoration scheme.

Nature has produced nothing more fascinatingly wonderful than sweet scented flowers, and the great poets of all times have in their impassioned lines sung the charms of fair women, as compared to flowers. To complete the simile and realize the ideal thus pictured, how natural that the perfume's aid should be invoked.

And in these different lines of perfumes from such makers as Hudnut, Vantine, Roger and Gallet, which we here bring to your attention, are odors truthfully illustrating the fragrance of the fresh flowers in their utmost intensity; superb and original creations, distinctive in character, not ordinary, but imparting to the personality that rich and ever sought for atmosphere of refinement.
